Totally different. And I strongly doubt that we will say a single word about the one up for comment.

The one up for comment is the MOA between DOI, DWR and the water contractors, wherein the contractors agree to pay a bazillion dollars to fund the studies for the BDCP, in return for which they either get (a) nothing, or (b) full editorial and policy control, depending on who you ask.

The comment period was dreamed up to address the public and congressional outcry over this thing (which is not too terribly different than how they have been running things already).

Hi Everyone,

Will you be reviewing the BDCP MOA that was released for public comment up until Nov. 16, 2011? Is our EPA MOA a separate document? (I am assuming our MOA is different than the one released for review).
